DR. LAING'S HORSES SECURE HONORS AT WILMINGTON SHOW

Bring New Laurels To The Stables of Well-Known
Bristol Horseman

FOGGY MORN IN FRONT

Sensational Jumper Gives A Good Account of Himself

New laurels were won Saturday at the Wilmington Horse Show by the horses of Dr. Edward J. Laing, of Bristol, which brought great credit to the Laing stables. It was a great day for the Bristol horses.

Foggy Morn, the sensational jumper Dr. Laing bought from William E. Schlusmeyer's HiRock Farm in Valley Falls, R. I. last year, swept the open jumper championship and thereby a first leg on the Delaware Challenge Trophy that goes with it. Under Carl Schilling's management throughout the show, the eight-year-old had amassed a total of 21 points against stiff competition.

The jumper reserve honor went to Foggy Morn's stablemate, Florismart, the good thoroughbred strip hunter-jumper that Dr. Laing bought from Mrs. Joseph Clements last year. Florismart had accumulated 14 points. His nearest rivals in the strong field were Maytop Stable's twice former national show champion, Bartender, and Springbury Farm's combination hunter-jumper, Billy Do, each of which had 10 points.

Foggy Morn won the third phase of the three-day open-jumper event and with top place in the first of those chapters added to it, carried off first money for three-day ranking. He also took third places both in the Olympic class over the cross-rig course, and in the "sky scraper," the show's high jumping test. Florismart won the Olympic contest.

Dr. Laing's horses this week will be shown at Devon.

The tests were given at Camp Ockanickon.

The winners of the Eagle Scout badges will be presented with their badges on the evening of June 7th at Camp Ockanickon.

Midway Firemen To Mark Anniversary

LAHASKA, May 26—The 10th anniversary of Midway Fire Company is to be observed tonight, a program being held in the club house adjoining the engine house on York Road.

Beginning with a small group of citizens pledged to protect the community, and with a second-hand engine, the organization has grown until its membership includes residents for a radius of several miles. The original engine has become an auxiliary pumper, and a large modern engine was put into service about a year ago.

The celebration will be informal, with each member takes a hot dish, eating "tools" and cup. Each member is also expected to take a guest, his wife, or friend. The committee also promises a jollification program.

Chief George Davis, prime mover in the organization, has filled his post continuously. Other officers are: Charles D. Davis, president; Leonard A. Hampton, vice-president; Watson D. Lake, secretary; Ernest J. Keyser, treasurer; trustees—Frank H. Lake, chairman; A. E. Keyser, John G. Fetterolf, Frank Cadwallader and Edwin Smith.

Put German Losses at 10,000

LONDON, May 26—German losses in the strenuous campaign for possession of Crete were estimated at nearly 10,000 today as Nazi war planes landed a number of small tanks and the British apparently managed some slight reinforcement of their embattled garrisons.

Information that British marines and artillerymen are now engaged in the increasingly heavy fighting indicated that one or more British ships had succeeded in slipping through the German guard to land a number of men, probably at some point on the southern coast outside the present area of hostilities.

Authoritative circles admitted that air-borne tanks have been landed. They are believed to be seven-ton tanks known as the "Chenille," each of which carries only two men.

German losses fall into several categories: Those killed and wounded in action, those drowned in the sinking of transports and those taken prisoner. As the Nazi losses neared the 10,000 mark, the Germans threw in parts of the fourth and fifth aerial divisions stationed in Greece. Reinforced by tanks, these troops launched a series of new offensives in the Maleme, Retimo and Candia sectors, where violent fighting was reported.

British forces had "cleaned up" the Retimo and Candia sectors over the week-end, but arrival of swarms of additional parachutists reopened the hostilities.

The Germans remain in full control of the Maleme airport and are consolidating their positions by parachute, tank and artillery landings. At Retimo and Candia, authoritative circles said that British troops "still hold the market-squares," but they are being constantly pummeled by Luftwaffe bombers.

London circles denied Berlin claims that German troops are in "effective occupation" of Western Crete, but the situation there is admittedly badly confused.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

A hobby and pet show was conducted Saturday in Morrisville high school gymnasium, sponsored by Morrisville Rotary Club.

More than 30 boys and girls, having passed their final examinations, will receive their promotion certificates at exercises of the Bedminster township schools which will be held in the Kellers Church church, Wednesday evening.

The main address will be given by Judge Calvin S. Boyer, Doylestown, who will also present the certificates. Another address will be given by Rev. Warren A. Breisch.

The class has selected as its colors red, white and blue and the red rose as the flower. The class motto is "Onward To Success."

With Arthur T. Reese, Doylestown high school history instructor, in charge, five high school students, members of the history club, and two guests, on Thursday visited Indian Rock in Bridgeton township, east of Ferndale, near Ringing Rocks, along the Delaware River.

With Doylestown benefitting almost entirely from the payments, with the exception of a few individuals who live in Philadelphia, the Doylestown Building Loan Association is now paying out its 23rd series which matured on Thursday amounting to $125,000. Harry C. Garner, treasurer, announced that the sum of $80,000 is being paid in cash to the stockholders, Saturday in Morrisville high school gymnasium, sponsored by Morrisville Rotary Club.

Miss Marie V. Welsh, secretary, said about 150 share-holders are sharing in the $125,000.

The payments ranged from $100 to $6,000, according to Miss Welsh.

Returning its report in the office of the Clerk of Quarter Sessions, Doylestown, the Grand Jury for the May sessions made recommendations for a padded cell for any insane prisoner who might be brought to the County Prison, improvements for the lighting system in the Court House offices and enlargements to meet the increase in the volume of business.

The Grand Jury, which had 56 bills of indictment laid before it last week, found 51 "true" and five "not true."

"In visiting the County Prison we found everything in a very clean and sanitary condition. We recommend the jail have a padded cell for an insane, drinking fountains in every corridor, and we wish to commend Earl D. Handy, warden, for the manner in which he performs his duty."

"In visiting the County Home we were all very well satisfied with the sanitary condition and home-like appearance. We commend the addition of sunrooms on the Southwest end be constructed in such a manner that it will serve as a fire escape, also contain a much needed elevator, and re-decoration of the first floor of the main building."

"We wish to commend Dr. S. McIlhatten for the manner in which he administers the duties as superintendent of the home."

The Daughters of the King, of the diocese of Philadelphia, met in St. James' Episcopal Church, Saturday afternoon at 3.30.

A shortened form of evening prayer, with a welcoming address, was conducted by the Rev. George E. Boswell. Mr. Boswell challenged the Daughters to a life of more vigorous service in the Master's vineyard. This was later emphasized by the Rev. Mr. Allenbach, of Christ Church and St. Michael and All Angels, Germantown. Mr. Allenbach's principal theme was "Doing About Doing Good"—seeking, finding a place where good can be done.

Miss Clara Stackhouse, president of the Daughters of the King, presided at the business meeting, following with Miss E. Beatrice Fisher as secretary. Miss Fisher's minutes of the last combined meeting at Yardley held in May of 1940, were most inspiring. Miss Fisher has tendered her resignation because of poor health.

Various chairmen reported on the many phases of the work. Mrs. James Gilbert, White Marsh, told of the work among the juniors; Mrs. Campbell of that among the shut-ins; Mrs. Hilsey of the many Bible studies held in most of the chapters of the Daughters of the King.

The Women's Guild of St. James' Church served a most delectable dinner at 6.30, in the parish house, after which an old-fashioned "sing" was led by Mrs. William Duhamel, accompanied by Mrs. Minerva Epstein.

The local chapter of the Daughters of the King has for its president Mrs. Harry H. Headley. Monthly meetings are held every second Tuesday of the month at Mrs. Headley's residence at eight p. m.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENI

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

A Bad Day's Work

Washington, May 24. THE passage by the Senate last Tuesday of the bill appropriating $1,500,000 for, and giving official status to, the so-called Office of Government Reports is one of the most unpleasant things that have happened in Washington in the last eight years. And that, it will be agreed, is saying a good deal.

WHEN the bill is rolling out this sum, of course, is insignificant. Nor is the possible pernicious use of the Bureau as a super-Administration propaganda agency anything about which to get excited at the moment. What is important—and distressing—is the weakening of confidence in the President which his insistence on this measure cannot help having among those who know the facts—and many do.

THE men who pushed him into this position cannot be really his friends.

No real friend would have wanted the President to take an action certain to reflect upon his good faith. And that is exactly what this does. It does more; it makes one feel that the solemn statements by Mr. Roosevelt made in a time of great national emergency cannot be relied upon. It makes it difficult to believe what he says. It diminishes confidence in him just at the time when confidence in him is most essential and when every right-thinking man, no matter how much he has dissented from the President in the past, is anxious to have confidence in him now.

THE lamentable truth is that Mr. Roosevelt's personal support of this bill is so completely in conflict with his own recent words that it just is not possible to make any real defense of it—and none has been made. Less than three months ago the President, speaking to the American people, declared that economy had become terribly vital and that he was determined to "pare to the bone" every non-defense expenditure. Yet, with an excuse so flimsy that no one could take it seriously, he exerted the full White House weight to push through this dubious measure.

WOOD PRESERVING CO. BUYS SITE AT EDDINGTON

Takes Title To 40 Acres of Land for Addition To Phila. Plant

INITIAL OUTLAY, $150,000

PHILADELPHIA, May 26—Keystone Wood Preserving Co., Inc., Wecacoe avenue and Porter street, South Philadelphia, where it occupies four acres of land, has purchased 40 acres at Eddington, Bucks County, for an additional plant, H. L. Reese, president, announced today.

"The expansion plan," Reese said, "is necessitated by an increasing demand for pressure treated forest products from railroads, public utilities, building construction and wharf building concerns."

An initial outlay of $150,000 is being made in connection with the new plant, and Reese said the management contemplates, if business improvement continues, to spend an additional $100,000.

The company, which started business in 1926, now has gross sales of more than $300,000 yearly. Acquisition of the additional site, Reese said, will expand operations at least 150% and enable the company to boost total forest products handled from 8,000,000 B.M. to 20,000,000.

In association with the Barrett Co., Keystone Wood Preserving, which uses a large volume of creosote oil in its operations, is planning a drive against the extensive damage done by termites, and decay by increasing the company's facilities for treating wood.

According to the U. S. Department of Commerce, the annual loss from termites and decay in small homes exceeds $40,000,000. Reese believes at least half of that sum could be saved through the use of pressure treated forest products in building construction.

Purchase of the Eddington site was made from the Hall Development Co., Langhorne, through Albert M. Greenfield & Co.

In addition to Reese, officers of Keystone Wood Preserving are Cummins Catherwood, chairman of board; Gilbert Megargee, vice-president; Henry E. L. Walker, secretary, and Thomas J. Reese, treasurer. The officers and former U. S. Senator David Baird, Jr., of New Jersey, constitute the board of directors.

MEMORIAL SERVICES IN CHURCHES ARE ATTENDED BY MANY

Rev. W. E. P. Haas Addresses
420 in Bristol Methodist Church

HONOR HEROIC DEAD

Two Churches at Hulmeville
Conduct Special Sunday Services

Four hundred and twenty were in attendance last evening at a special Memorial service in Bristol Methodist Church, which program was attended by members of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, and American Legion Auxiliary, members of the Cadet drum and bugle corps, and the Bristol high school chorus.

Seated upon the platform with the pastor of the church, the Rev. W. E. Preston Haas, were chaplains of two Legion posts, the Rev. Arthur F. Gibson, Eddington, chaplain of Bracken Post; and Wilbur Fite, chaplain of the Philadelphia Gas Works Post. Mr. Fite led in the responsive lesson, and the Rev. Mr. Gibson offered prayer.

Seven excellent numbers were rendered by the high school chorus, with Charles Quigley, school music director, leading.

In his message the Rev. Mr. Haas told of the two reasons for celebrating Memorial Day, to honor the heroic dead, and for exhortations and reconsecrations of the living. He recalled that the Spartan children were required to rise and repeat the names of the 300 heroes who died at Thermopylae when they turned back the Persian hordes, this being not only in honor of the dead but also to inculcate in the living the same principles for which the defenders died.

The clergyman stated that it is a sad commentary on human nature that in time of war men are as courageous as lions, and in time of peace as indifferent or as listless as sheep. The present difficulty is probably due to this condition, he stated. "We do not have the moral stamina in peacetime that we have in time of conflict." He suggested that all remember those who have gone at their best, keeping in mind their strength of character and nobility of purpose. He mentioned the possibility of desecrating Memorial Day. "We must not get away from the original intentions."

Taps were sounded by representatives of the Cadet Corps. Special prayer was offered for Miss Emily Bracken, sister of the late Robert W. Bracken, in whose honor the local American Legion Post was named. Miss Bracken is ill at her home.

At the two churches in Hulmeville yesterday, special services were also held. In Grace Episcopal Church the annual memorial service in honor of Jesse W. Soby, and the members of Jesse W. Soby Post, 148, American Legion, Langhorne, and other ex-service men who have gone on, was held in the morning. Last evening in Nesheim Methodist Church, a community service recognized services given by public organizations.

At the Grace Church in the morning the Rev. Louis E. Fifer, 3d, vicar of the church, delivered an address, using as the basis for his message the words of Abraham Lincoln, "Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us dare to do our duty as we understand it." In brief memorial, as the Rev. Fifer named each of those to be memorialized, William Gaston, commander of Soby Post, placed a white carnation on the altar. Those remembered were Jesse W. Soby, killed in action at Mountoncon, France; George Bennett, Andrew Brown, Charles Cornell, William Dahl, Benedict DeStoffo, Charles Donnelly, John Ehrlen, James Garvin, Irvin Herltage, John Keim, Ross MacIver, Harold Meyers, Dr. R. R. Paxon, Dr. Samuel Ridge, C. Sullivan, Winder Williamson, and the unknown soldier.

The colors and the post flag were advanced by George Panzer and Thomas K. Schatt, members of the post during the assembly of the cross and colors; and taps were sounded by Stanley Zaiot, a member of the junior drum and bugle corps.

In the Hulmeville Methodist Church last evening the Rev. Wilmer E. Harkness in a community service recognition program, addressed members of William Penn Fire Company and Auxiliary, borough council, Parent-Teacher Association, Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts. His text was "But whosoever of you shall be chiefest shall be the servant of all."

BEGGING TROUBLE

Criticism is widespread over the government's failure to stop the flow of United States oil to Japanese warships and planes. But this isn't the only instance of the peculiar squeamishness of authorities to deal forcefully with the Japanese problem.

Terminal Island, part of Los Angeles harbor, is one of the Navy's key West Coast bases. Off Terminal Island is the anchorage of the United States fleet. On the island are the fleet air station and aviation field; petroleum docks where Navy tankers load up to supply the field; docks and piers of Los Angeles harbor; Bethlehem shipbuilding yards; numerous small yards working on defense orders.

In addition, the government is spending tens of millions of dollars for a breakwater, new piers and docks, Navy shops and warehouses, and one of the largest shipbuilding yards on the Pacific Coast.

"In the midst of this vital military area live 3,000 Japanese, native and foreign born. Most of them are fishermen, whose boats ply the waters occupied by the fleet. The Navy pays no attention to them.

To demonstrate the possibilities of sabotage, it is declared that an official one night rowed to a major oil dock without encountering a guard or patrol boat, and after placing chalk marks at various spots, returned without being detected. A Saboteur could have done that just as easily as did an official, but he wouldn't have stopped with chalk marks.

CIVILIAN DEFENSE

If someone would essay to impart a truly comprehensive understanding of what is expected to be achieved through the new agency of civilian defense it would be easier to evaluate the importance of the latest of the Roosevelt agencies.

At present the most to be culled from the official statement of the purpose of civilian defense is that it is something to be created for "civilian protection." And that seemingly makes it all as clear as mud.

Perhaps the dynamic Mr. LaGuardia, who heads the organization, will in the course of time chart the way. At any rate, the President's executive order provides for no end of advisory aids to attain the object, though as to the object it buries itself in a fog of words.

Perhaps with the aid of that advice the Office of Civilian Defense may develop into something more understandable than "civilian defense" is intended to promote "civilian protection." "Raising civilian morale" is one improvement on other explanatory phrases.

From it emerges a hint that what is involved in the LaGuardia job is a "needling" of the American public, whose low condition of belligerency has been a cause of positive disappointment to the administration.

Dinosaurs existed in Texas long after they disappeared from other parts of North America, which is not surprising. Dinosaurs needed breathing space.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Aug. 28, 1879. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

The Hook and Ladder Company and Washington Cornet Band took with them upon their excursion to Tacony, last Saturday, 200 or more people. The band furnished enlivening music for the occasion. When the excursionists reached home at 11 o'clock that night, they appeared more pleased and better satisfied than if each had expended $2 to enjoy the pleasure of a day's ride up and down the country pent up in the heated atmosphere of crowded railroad cars.

At last accounts Edward Brudon had caught six opossums at his residence, with no prospect of the supply running out. His chickens will feel greatly relieved when they learn that the opossum colony in their vicinity is entirely exterminated. The animals captured are small, being about the size of a large rat. Mr. Brudon has his traps set to catch the old pair, which are evidently located near his premises, but has not yet been successful.

A new and attractive feature of the afternoon trips of the Columbia is the piano recitals by Augustus Victor Benham, the famous boy pianist.

Frank N. Boaz has been awarded the contract for rough-casting Washington Hall, he being the lowest bidder.

Rev. G. W. Ridgely, who was rector of St. James' Church 40 years ago, and who built Episcopal Churches at Hulmeville and Newtown, as well as in Bristol, was in town last week, the guest of Rev. W. S. Perkins. Mr. Ridgely is now 82 years of age, but is as straight as an arrow, and quite active. At one time he was the law partner of Henry Clay, and at present he is rector of a church in Chester, Pa.

Louis A. Ridge, formerly principal of the public schools of our borough, has been spending several weeks with relatives at China Hall.

Last Monday dawned with not very clear skies. The day looked rather dreary for aquatic sport. Nevertheless, it was the day set apart for a regatta which was to start from Beverly. . . . The Bristol boats were among the first to reach there, notwithstanding the Au Revoir lost some time in rescuing the hat of Dan Githens, the vigilant aid-de-camp of the captain. About two o'clock a gun was fired from the wharf as a signal to get ready, and a few minutes later a second report announced the time to start. The Olivia, the Magie, and 11 smaller boats spread their sails to the wind, and sped down the river with a fair breeze blowing directly after them. . . . The Au Revoir continued to gain . . . and went flying up the river leaving everything behind.

Henry Wright's old mill, back of his property on Bath street, has been rented by Joseph Wilkinson, who is using it to manufacture yarn.

The circus with its curious animals, its electric light, its gorgeous parade and martial music, will make Bristol lively tomorrow. It is a well established fact that the business of dealing in "Rags, bones and old iron" has been largely indulged in by the youth of our community during the past and present week.

IT never could have gone through without his support. It increases by one hundred per cent. the appropriation for an almost useless bureau which should never have been created in the first place but which it is now proposed to expand by adding 141 new Federal jobholders to the hundreds already on its rolls. The argument that the bureau furnishes members of Congress, the President and the people (which is the only argument made for the bill) with valuable information, is completely hollow, as was shown by Senator Taft during the debate. Actually, there is no real service it performs which could not be done by the Congressional Library with one additional clerk. And it would be better done by the library, as then there would be no question of politics and propaganda.

THE bureau is not remotely connected with defense, and no such claim has even been made. In the Senate there were forty votes for the bill, eighteen against. Glass and Byrd were the only dissenting Democrats, but thirty-seven Senators did not vote at all, which is pretty revealing of the kind of pressure applied. Senatorial friends of Mr. Roosevelt shamefacedly say: "Oh, well, it's a little thing and he wanted it; and, after his letter, voting against it would have seemed a personal affront." But it isn't a little thing. It's a big thing and a bad thing, because it lessens faith in the President at exactly the moment when faith in him is most necessary. If he can do this in small things, what is to prevent him from doing it in large ones? In everything?

THIS sort of Presidential stultification and this sort of waste make Administration exhortations to the people cheerfully to bear the heavy taxes about to be imposed seem strained, indeed. The people will bear the taxes all right, but they would be more cheerful about bearing them if they had not been told first that every non-defense item must be "pared to the bone" and then discovered their President doubling the appropriation for a non-defense agency the mere existence of which it is difficult to justify.

THAT is not the way to inspire confidence; nor the way to unify a nation. For the questionable and costly St. Lawrence waterways project, which Mr. Roosevelt has revived, there is at least a plausible defense argument. It isn't a sound argument, but it isn't absurd. For the recently passed farm grab bill, to the passage of which he offered no resistance at all, although it knocks the bottom out of his budget estimates, there is a defensible point of view. It is selfish and wrong, but it is not without some facts to support it.

BUT the arguments for this Office of Government Reports' increase and expansion have neither plausibility nor substance. No thinner defense of a money bill has been heard in Congress in a long time. No bill with less merit has been passed in years. Those who persuaded the President to put this thing through should be ashamed. Nothing that diminishes belief in the purity of his word can be called a little thing in these times. This bill does that. How could he do a thing like this and then ask sacrifices of others?

CHAPTER 1

Anthony Worth, Jr., was hunting for a job, not adventure, when he sank down wearily beside a shabby stranger in Washington Square. Sometimes a fellow gets tired of grinning and taking it on the chin, and wonders if a break will ever come. Tony was wondering just that, and the bright June morning made him feel worse. Girls were farthest from his mind as he turned his smoke-gray eyes on the down-and-out. Another poor fellow licked by life and consoled by Bowery booze.

The stranger was taking it easy, dozing on a cushion of newspapers. Tony's glance flickered downwards. Ironically enough, the top page was society news. The slack-jointed figure of the derelict sprawled half over the centered photograph of a girl around whom were inserted sketches of palm trees, a sliver of sea, and a yacht. He recognized her type!

Tony muttered angrily, "Same old stuff!" But he bent closer, irritated because the girl's face was hidden from view. Then, suddenly, he laughed as whimsy moved him to reflect: Guess it's the first time that lady's ever been sat on by a real tramp! He tried to feel amused, but it made him sore. It was her fault. It probably never entered her silly head what happened to papers, once they were thrown away.

He didn't need to see her face. He could tell her type: A de luxe gal set among gadgets such as yachts. Tony's frown lingered on the cut of her sporty linen suit, the turn of her wrist and ankle. Well, he was done with that sort of thing.

Tony looked abruptly away into the sunny spaces of the Square, dotted with plump busses and noisy children. He was on edge today, and that gal exasperated his discontent with the world. The Park Avenue breed was nothing new to him; he wouldn't buy a mailed milk for one of those dubs. Three years of Harvard, then law school, and plenty of so-called fun on the side, had given him his fill.

The past year had toughened him, he supposed. It was a sour way to start life; not being able to help financially after his father's business crash; not being able to get on with his career. He ought to conquer that infernal pride of his which had kept him away from all his old friends—all of them except good old Ed Keeler, whose couch and bathroom were life-savers. Perhaps some day he'd qualify, and work beside Ed in the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

You ought to get going, he thought. I'm slipping, my lad! But he was in no hurry to tackle another round of offices with blasé receptionists barring his way, even when he wore that he jeeringly called his passport suit. He had it on today; a gray sack suit draped by his one-time Fifth Avenue tailor.

As Tony slowly got to his feet, a nearby child started howling over a scratched knee. The noise woke the tramp. A cop was sauntering toward him.

"Ain't there any peace in this world?" the old fellow whined, gathering up his papers, ready to move on.

"Hey!" Tony impulsively fished a dime from the scanty supply in his pocket. "Want to sell those papers?"

"It's a deal, Brother." And he pushed the crumpled pile at Tony, grabbed the coin and shuffled off.

Tony sat down again. He must be nuts to part with the price of coffee and doughnuts to save the picture of that girl—well, from traveling further in such company.

He didn't look at the page for a moment, but when he did, he almost flung it from him. Of all the jokes on him, this was tops!

He'd drawn Marie Schuyler for his dime! Her deb year had been one succession of headlines; he had avoided her like the plague. She was just an exhibitionist doing a strip tease with her millions; another spoiled brat flying all over the country in search of excitement.

His fingers crisped the edge of the sheet as he glared down at her.

Tony was probably the only man, on the New York hostesses' dance lists, who hadn't met her and shared in her escapades. She must be twenty now—quite old for the deb set! She hadn't changed much from other photographs he'd seen. A beauty, all right! Her wide-set eyes seemed to be mocking him right now.

Tony scowled at a column devoted to her doings. So she was cruising around Greece, poor little orphan, on the ocean-going yacht her father had left her with a provision for its upkeep! And, apparently, aside from Eve Pryne—as a chaperone—that was a laugh!—and Ray Sheldon (whoever he was), her guests were a bunch of titled foreigners.

"Crazy—cock-eyed!" Tony tore the page in strips so that no one else could use it, tossed them into a refuse can, and walked away, his mouth grim.

Tony Worth's society page reverie on a park bench

With fuses smoldering near every nation's boundary lines, how could anyone responsible for her—if anyone was—leave her loose? Who were those present playmates—the Marchese Lippi, Sir (or was it?) Felix Northem, Captain (or was it, Major?) Eric Thelme?

You didn't need much imagination to realize what an American heiress would be worth to unscrupulous persons over there. She'd be pure gold to certain powers if she married into one of their factions. Any fool knew the propaganda that was going on, to get hold of American money, American influence. Laying herself open to it was the sort of stunt Marie Schuyler would pull!

Mechanically, Tony walked to Sixth Avenue, swinging into Waverly Place. He was upset—amazingly upset; in no state to hunt a job. He wanted to be alone in Keeler's comfortably untidy, small living-room. Ed wouldn't be home, of course, but Tony had a key.

But Ed Keeler was home, his carport head and huge shoulders bent over the telephone. When Tony stepped in, Ed shouted over the wire, "Here he is! We're on our way."

Keeler was a heavy man, over two hundred pounds to Tony's one hundred eighty. But he bounced up, light as a ballet dancer on his feet, towering two inches above Tony's six feet. "Holy smoke, where have you been?" he demanded. "Something big has turned up."

Tony Worth stared. "Idling in the park," he said.

"Well, you aren't idling any more, my lad." Ed was still shouting. "You're going—" He checked himself, and grew mysterious. "Right now, we're paying a little visit to the boss."

"That suits me," Tony grinned in his old light-hearted way, burdens rolling off him. This might be his lucky day after all. If it hadn't been for the tramp, and Marie's photograph that had got him into such a stew, he would have been tramping the streets as usual.

Ed Keeler turned his back, his voice wary yet triumphant. "Judge Fairchild dropped in to see the Chief this morning. They're old pals. But this was a business visit. He needed advice badly."

Judge Fairchild was one of the law's big luminaries. Tony's heart thudded. He hid his excitement and, raising a dark eyebrow, said "So what?"

Ed answered with, "So you can thank your stars I hung around. We're pretty well fed up with spy scares and a lot of mush from alarmists. But when the old gentleman mentioned a few names, in connection with something else, I thought of you as a natural for the job."

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Gately)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

O Thou Who art eternal in the heavens, bless those who are afflicted in the flesh; those who have their burdens to bear, their crosses to carry; those who are physically incompetent, unable to fight in their own strength the battle of life. Fill them with a sense of Thy nearness and a realization that spiritual health is of far more importance than physical strength. Enable those of us who are strong to help the weak, that their way may be easier and their burden lighter. In the name of Christ. Amen.

Miss Doris McNinney Is Bride of Martin Lutz

At an afternoon wedding on Saturday, in Bristol Methodist Church, Miss Doris Marie McNinney, 1025 Chestnut street, was wed to Mr. Martin Lutz, son of Mr. Harry Lutz, Green Lawn Park. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Lillian McNinney, Chestnut street.

Officiating at the two o'clock ceremony was the Rev. W. E. Preston Haas, pastor of the church in which the nuptials occurred; and presiding at the organ was Mrs. Samuel R. Smith, Edgely, who played the wedding marches. Mrs. Smith also accompanied the vocalist, Mr. James Lutz, Pond street, brother of the groom, his selection being "O Promise Me."

Mrs. Leonard Dugan, Buckley street, was bridesmaid for her cousin; and Mr. Lutz, the vocalist, also served as groomsmen.

Pink and blue were the colors chosen by the bride and her attendant. The bride was attractive in a floor-length gown of poudre blue sheer over satin, the full skirt having scattered over it tiny bows of ribbon in matching tone. The neckline was sweetheart shape, the sleeves short and puffed. On her hair was a wreath of blue flowers, and she wore a blue face veil; white sandals, and carried a bridal bouquet of lilies.

Mrs. Dugan's gown was of rose taffeta, floor length. She also wore a head wreath, this and her face veil being in rose tone. Her slippers were white, and she carried pink roses.

A small reception occurred at the home of the bride's mother, where the newly-weds will make their home. For a few days' honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls, N. Y., Mrs. Lutz wore an ensemble of brown, tan felt hat with brown trim, and brown accessories.

FISCHER'S WIN FROM BRISTOL A. A. BY 12 TO 5 COUNT

Piuma Hit Hard During First Two Innings By Victors

SWEENEY PITCHES WELL
Balanced Philly Nine Tabs Fifteenth In Succession

By Jack Gill
The Bristol A. A., picking on big time stuff on their second start of the season, felt the sting of defeat yesterday when they dropped a decision to the fast Fischer combine by a 12 to 5 score. A bevy of seven runs in the first two innings off starting pitcher Herb Piuma was the signal for the winners' fifteenth consecutive semi-pro triumph.

During the course of the fray, Manager Johnny Mulholland was impressed by the precision line infield play of the Fischer club. Wolfe, Rossi and Barnshaw figured prominently in a slick double play combination. Throughout the afternoon they dug sharp hit ball out of the dirt to make Lee Sharkey smile in relief.

Lefty Tommy Sweeney took up the mound duty for the Bristol clan in the second inning with a 7 to 0 deficit, starting him in the face. He pitched fine ball the remainder of the fray and allowed but six hits and five runs.

The homesters had a big fifth inning, during which they tallied all of their five markers. Felkner opened up by walking. Oppman, Cooper and Carter followed with clean singles. After Harrison had struck out, Johnny Stallone beat out a hit. He later advanced to third and stole home. Then Sweeney doubled only to be left stranded on third.

Although Piuma's pitching was sour at the start, he hit well enough to take honors. His three base knocks were all clean bingles. Bonke Carter once again schtilled at first base. Ed Hunter gave way to Piuma in center field after the second canto when he was hit in the head by a pitched ball. After an examination at the Jewish Hospital, however, he was released and later returned to the field.

RALLY BY ODD FELLOWS FAILS TO WIN GAME

An Odd Fellows' rally in the last frame which netted two runs fell one short of tying the score yesterday afternoon on St. Ann's field as the Auto Boys moved into second place in the Bristol Suburban League, nosing out the Oddies, 5-4.

It was the only frame in which the Oddies hit Bragg with a certainty. After Kohler had struck out, Ike Watson doubled to center. Bragg erred on Jones' smack to him and the two runners were safe. "Kenny" Clifton rapped a two-bagger to center and both runners crossed and Kenny perched himself on second base with the tying run. But neither Hibbs nor Pfaffenrath could move Clifton to the plate.

Bragg who practically single-handed beat the Radcliffe street also led the bludgeon welders at the plate. In the first canto with Kratz and Mulligan on base, "Loggie" wallowed a home run to right which accounted for a trio of runs. He then commenced to hold the Odd Fellows to four hits, two coming in the last inning. He struck out ten. Jones who relieved George Wren after the first inning pitched fine relief ball, allowing but three hits. Clifton led the losers at the plate with two out of four.

BRISTOL NINE TO MEET BENSLEM IN CROWN BATTLE

Two School Nines To Meet In Championship Feud On Landreth Field

CARDINALS SHOW FORM

Owls Momentarily Appear To Have Lost Their Touch

(By Jack W. Gill)
Bristol and Bensalem carry their athletic feud to the baseball field tonight as the two squads battle one another for the Lower Bucks School League. Carded to get under way at six o'clock sharp on Landreth's smooth terrain, this game will carry everything that the boys have been battling for throughout the entire season.
The Cardinals came hurtling down the homestretch in bunny hop fashion after appearing drab at the start of the season. With more steam than a house wife during the Christmas rush, the local gang sealed a few important frays up and vaulted themselves into a tie with Bensalem.
The Owls momentarily lost their touch. After hitting all of the high spots attainable in the way of pitching, batting and fielding, they dropped drowsily in a couple of last-minute league contests. It all started when Langhorne's Bobby Mitchell hung a fast one over on them. It came to a complete climax last week when Jimmy Hopkins and Herb Yates pitched and hit Bristol to a 6-4 triumph.
So tonight finds them in their "must" game. The winner of this fray earns the right to face Richboro, upper division titlists, in a three-game series for the championship next week.
A breakdown of each nine finds Bensalem a bit keener all around. But the improved play of the Cardinals, which hit a peak during the waning moments, may mislead the casual fan into a misconception.
